

Are We Forgotten?

Lyrics by Jonathan Patton

Are we alone are we forgotten?
Are we the listening?
Though we set sail across the ocean,
Is our freedom just a dream?

Etched in a stone across the sea
They've marked the grave that waits for me
And there I'll lay when I'm carried home
For few alive return from where we go

A heart and two names etched in a tree
Marked by the girl that waits for me
But we ride to war where many fall
To memories, and all the while we're singing

Are we alone are we forgotten?
Are we the listening?
Though we set sail across the ocean,
Is our freedom just a dream?

A thousand prayers I've prayed tonight
Through this haunting mist that veils the sky
I hear a vampire scream as they wait for us
Will we be turned, will blood become our lust

A witch in a cave has cursed this ground
Here men turn to wolves when the sun goes down
Our lives are war and many fall
To memories, and all the while we're singing

Are we alone are we forgotten?
Are we the listening?
Though we set sail across the ocean,
Is our freedom just a dream?
