

By Candlelight

Lyrics by Jonathon Patton

Kill me and drink my tears
I'll gladly leave them behind
Promise you'll never say that
I'll fall in love again

Hold me just to keep me here
Then gladly leave me behind
How could you ever say that
I'll fall in love again

As we die, by candlelight, we'll be fine

And this war I've made my home
I'm scared the bleeding will start again
Can I return to all I've known
I won't be needing my heart again

Guns raised like hell we roar
It's kill or be killed tonight
I carry this flag of angels
The only color I love

Through the blood and the smoke we've crawled
Somehow these feelings survive
How could you ever say
We will fall in love again

As we die by candlelight, we'll be fine

And this war I've made my home
I'm scared the bleeding will start again
Can I return to all I've known
I won't be needing my heart again

Turn your face away don't watch me suffocate
When will we all fall in love again
Turn your face away don't watch me suffocate
When will we all fall in love again
